

Limerick, October 17, 2015

*Poem sent to Genevieve Guetemme – transferred to Richard Berengarten

Tell me about your sentence and I'll tell you who you are
Keep working at it, for at least a couple of hundred hours
As well as on being 'flexible'.

Yo-yoing up and down, nothing regular coming in High pay, low pay, pay (maybe) by the hour.
Big Daddy TOTAL is the Godfather of these people
The Clermont-Ferrand MICHELIN model wasn't born yesterday
And Portuguese masons have switched their trowel for tyres.

The earth is flat and hasn't got a core, I live on a flat surface
And I won't be bringing along my furniture in a container that docks into Le Havre on some ruddy container ferry
Like some GINORMOUS sugar cube.

The 'sent poem of the day' (PPP Poetic and Planetary Project) is potentially addressed to seven billion people, each one eventually becoming the recipient of his poem by post or hand in hand. Such a project to which joined a number of accomplices began on May 29, 2013.

This poem is part of a set written at the University of Limerick at the symposium of the ADEFFI "Systems", 16 and 17 October, 2015.

Jacques Jouet